William W. Benson was honored by the Arvada Odd Fellows Lodge on March 4th, when he was presented a 60-year _____ in appreciation of his years of active service in the Arvada Lodge.

Benson holds a record in the local lodge - he holds the longest unbroken membership, and is the oldest member of the Lodge, having passed his 95th birthday last September 11th.

He joined the Odd Fellows in 1905, and has held every office in the order, and has been regular in his attendance.

Benson and his wife, Hettie, came to Arvada in 1904. A year later, the Bensons purchased a home at what is now 5909 Yarrow St, where Mr Benson still lives. Mrs Benson, known to her many friends as Aunt Het, died in 1953. The Bensons had been married over 59 years at the time of Mrs Benson's death.

Arvada was a town of about 800 persons when the Bensons first settled here. There were hitching posts in front of each business house, streets were unpaved and the few sidewalks were made of boards.

Arvada's street lighting system consisted of six carbide lamps on eight-foot poles. In 1904, Aldis Bruce, who now lives at 5622 Allison St, was the boy who had the job of climbing a ladder each evening and lighting the lamps.

For 21 years, before his retirement in 1953, Benson was a member of the Arvada Police Force, being the town night watchman.

Twice during his service to the community, he was wounded by gun shots from robbers. Pic in Enterprise.
